RE-ENACTS TRAGEDY

Tells Police Shooting Was Purely Accidental and Shows Them How

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 22.—Gaetor Cesario, seventeen, a farm hand, is being held in the Bucks County Prison charged with the murder of Daniel DeFrancisco, six, a ward of the Catholic Children's Bureau, who for the past four years had been living at the home of Mrs. Mary Howard, Warrington township, seven miles south of here.

The fatal shooting in which one boy had his head shot off and another boy was shot in the arm took place in a chicken house in the rear of the home of Samuel Cortardi, County Line road, midway between Hallowell and Eureka, in Bucks County.

DeFrancisco's brains were shot out by a shell from a double-barrel 10-gauge shot gun. The shooting took place shortly before noon yesterday.

John Dwyer, fifteen, who also lived at the home of Mrs. Howard, was shot in the left arm. He was rushed to the Abington Memorial Hospital in a public service company's truck. It may be necessary to amputate his arm to save his life.

When Corporal William Francis, of the Doylestown detail of State Police, and Coroner John J. Sweeney, M. D., of this place, arrived at the scene of the shooting they found Cesario.

When Coroner Sweeney asked Cesario to enact the details of the shooting just as things happened, the boy stated that he and Daniel DeFrancisco, John Dwyer and Victor Howard, ten, were out in the woods together in the morning playing around. Cesario said he went into the house of Samuel Cortardi and took a shot gun that was found there. He told Corporal Francis that Cortardi, whom he had worked for as a farm hand for the past two weeks, had told him not to touch the gun, but that "he took it anyway."

After the boys had played in the woods for some time, they returned to the Cortardi property. Cesario said he went into the chicken house with the gun. He told the police he saw a chicken on a nest and wanted to scare the chicken off because he knew there was an egg underneath her.

"I took the butt of the gun and knocked it against the nest to scare the chicken when the gun discharged," Cesario said as he enacted the affair before the police.

"Something must have went wrong and the shot exploded. The three boys were looking in a window of the chicken house at me and the shot struck Daniel and blew his head off and hit John Dwyer in the left arm. The other boy, Victor, was not hurt."

Cesario, who said his father is Frank Cesario, 451 East Haines street, Germantown, said he then picked up a net and carried him several hundred yards to the home of Mrs. Howard, his foster-mother. When Mrs. Howard saw what had happened she broke down and wept bitterly for she considered Daniel a favorite among the wards who boarded with her.

Daniel did not go to school with his brother Patrick, yesterday morning because of the inclement weather.

Police and Coroner Sweeney somewhat discount the story of the boy who did the shooting they say. Some of his statements do not agree with other evidence it is said. Indications point strongly however to the shooting being accidental.

The dead boy, Daniel, is said to have parents living in Trenton, N. J., but he has been in charge of the Catholic Children's Bureau.

MILLION TRACTORS ARE PROMISED TO RUSSIA

Country Will Be Well Mechanized by 1938, It Is Believed

LONDON, Jan. 22.—(INS)—On Oct. 1, 1933—the official close of the initial five years' industrialization plan—Russian peasants are promised more than 400,000 tractors; and a million by 1938.

Today four great tractor plants are being built in different parts of the Soviet union. They are planned to turn out more than 100,000 a year—as against the eight to ten thousand imported annually from America at present.

A hundred thousand tractors a year—it is absurd, fantastic, and yet they may do it. Personally I am inclined to believe that they will be doing splendidly if they turn out 25 per cent of that number—but that will be 25 times more than they have ever had before. But whether it is 25,000 or 100,000 a year, these new living things of the machine age—those symbols of the future—will find their way over the great Russian land and millions of rich acres will for the first time feel the thrill of a plow and hear the songs of a reaper.

With it all goes great plans for stupendous state grain farms, co-operative fruit farms, cotton plantations, and a magnificent sweep of enterprises that taxes any imagination.

Furrows five miles long on the greatest wheat farm in the world—the "gigant" with its 244,000 black acres lying as flat as a billiard table in the rich lands of the North Caucasus. Plans for 120 great state grain farms, averaging 100,000 acres each, and all the work to be done by the most modern American machines, tractors, drills, combines—with not a single horse in sight.

Great cotton projects based on incredible irrigation schemes—worked out and supervised by the finest engineering brains of America! Fruit orchards as great as California's—packing plants and canning establishments—improved breeds of cattle and sheep—great dairy farms—a thousand and one fantastic ideas planned in a way almost beyond conception.

And a Russian land to do all this in! Millions upon millions of beautiful, rich, black soil lying like virgin prairies—the Iowa and Kansas and Nebraska of forty years ago—unfenced, open to the rain and sun and new ideas; spaces stretching beyond a thousand horizons—one-sixth of the whole earth; a land of the future; a land worthy to contest with great

THREE HURT WHEN BUS SKIDS, CRASHING INTO TROLLEY CAR NEAR EDDINGTON

Three persons were injured this morning when a trolley car of the Trenton, Bristol & Philadelphia Railway Company and a P. R. T. bus collided between Cornwells Heights and Eddington shortly after 10 o'clock.

The injured: Mrs. Clarence Vansant, State Road, Torredale; Mrs. Anna Patterson, Maple avenue, Eddington; Mrs. George Lind, Eddington Home property.

It is not believed that any of the above were seriously hurt, although X-rays were taken at the Harriman Hospital to which institution the trio was taken by passersby. They are now resting at their homes.

It is stated by those who witnessed the accident that the driver of the bus endeavored to pass a truck. As he made his way around it he sighted the trolley car coming in the opposite direction, and as his brakes were applied the bus skidded, the center of the vehicle striking the trolley. The operator of the trolley car was Ernest Anderson, of Croydon. The trolley as well as the bus was somewhat damaged.

BRISTOL HIGH BOWS TO AMBLER IN GOOD GAME

Exciting Contest Ends In Score of 30 to 28

JAY VEES ALSO PLAY

The high school quintet lost to Ambler in the most exciting game played so far. In the last three minutes of the game the "gym" was in an uproar while the boys were fighting valiantly to catch up to Ambler's score, 30.

With the score 30-28 against them the Bristol boys fought hard to either tie or win the game in the last few minutes. They had a chance to tie when Tullio received the ball under the basket but missed the shot. The game was, no doubt the best one played on the high school floor this year.

The local five accomplished 8 fouls out of 13 tries while the visiting team is credited with three out of 8 tries. Green seems to be known or recognized as a basketball star and as a result was guarded closely. He made four field goals and five fouls out of seven tries. Stout starred for Ambler and was also high scorer with seven double-deckers and two fouls to his credit.

The J. V.'s also played an exciting game, trouncing the visiting team to the score of 29-20. Although the Ambler team consisted of men of great size, Bristol's third team easily outplayed their guests in every department.

BURNING PAPER IN BASEMENT SETS JOISTS AFIRE

Langhorne Folks Aroused When Burglar Alarm Is Sounded

DAMAGE IS $5,000.00

Four Fire Companies Summoned from Nearby Towns To Fight the Flames

Fire for a time threatened to totally destroy the Peoples National Bank, Langhorne, last night at 10:55. The blaze was discovered by a watchman who first started the burglar alarm going and then turned in a fire alarm. Fire companies were summoned from Langhorne, South Langhorne, Newtown and Hulmeville. The two Langhorne companies were the only ones to get into service.

The fire was in the basement of the main building in a pile of papers and boxes. The papers were not valuable but they created a blaze of sufficient size to set fire to the joists beneath the main floor. The watchman, Frank Blank, had his attention attracted by the odor of smoke and he began an investigation. The smoke became thicker and soon filled the building.

The blaze was directly beneath the receiving tellers' cage and the only thing that held the fire in check was the tile flooring which was laid on wooden joists. The joists were burned to such an extent that they will have to be renewed.

The damage is estimated at approximately $5,000.

Much excitement was caused by the fire and the ringing of the burglar alarm. Crowds of spectators were attracted to the scene and dense clouds of smoke rolled from the building for over an hour.

TALK ON "CITIZENSHIP" BY WOMAN MAGISTRATE

Women Do Not Pay Enough Attention to Politics, Says Mrs. Fahnestock

FIFTY HEAR ADDRESS

"Women do not pay enough attention to politics," was one of the messages addressed to those assembled in the Travel Club home here last night, when Mrs. V. E. Fahnestock, magistrate of Court No. 6, Philadelphia, spoke before members and friends of the Bristol Women's Christian Temperance Union.

The woman magistrate stated in her talk on "Citizenship" that now that women have the right to vote they should do so, and should likewise see that others vote.

"Parents do not pay enough attention to the amusements of their children today. They do not know many times where the boys and girls are, or what they are doing."

Mrs. Fahnestock cited many cases that have come to her attention in the court duties, and pleased all with her discourse. She was introduced by Mrs. Harry H. Headley, president of the local W. C. T. U., who also presided over the business session later in the evening.

Two vocal duets were given by Miss Grace Shaver and Mrs. Charles I. Bowen. A social time was likewise enjoyed by the group of 50 men and women present.

MRS. ROSE C. DEA RUN DOWN ON PIKE AT MAYNES LANE

Car Driven by Benj. Broadbridge of East Circle, Bristol

SLEET STORM IS CAUSE

Driver is Released in $2,000 Bail by Justice Lynn

The rain and sleet storm late yesterday afternoon caused one death and one automobile accident in this section.

An aged woman was almost instantly killed last night when struck by an automobile after stepping from a trolley car at Bristol Pike and Maynes Lane.

The dead: Rose C. Dea, 60, Gosline Tract, Croydon.

Mrs. Dea, who resided in Croydon for a number of years, was employed in Philadelphia and commuted daily between her home and place of employment.

She was returning home last night and at about 5:42 stepped off a trolley car at Bristol Pike and Maynes Lane. The car had gone about 100 feet when an automobile of the Philadelphia Electric Company, Bristol office, struck the woman. The automobile was driven by Benjamin Broadbridge, East Circle, Bristol.

The victim was rushed to the Harriman Hospital where she was pronounced dead. The body was then removed to the morgue of Galzerano, funeral directors.

Mrs. Dea suffered a fractured skull, fractured leg and two broken wrists. Mrs. Dea was the widow of the late John Dea and she was employed by the Eskimo Kaitling Mills, of Philadelphia. She was a native of Germany. She worked daily at her employment, having an invalid daughter to support.

The deceased is survived by four daughters, Frances Tullback, Mary Dea, Martha Langonski, Rose Horger, and one son, John Dea.

Funeral services will be held Saturday morning at the late home of the deceased Orchard avenue, Croydon, at nine o'clock. There will be high mass at St. Thomas Aquinas' Church, Croydon, and burial will be in St. Mark's Cemetery.

Broadbridge was placed under arrest by Highway Patrol, South Langhorne, and given a hearing before Justice of Peace, Edward Lynn. He was released in $2,000 bail.

During the height of the sleet storm which covered the highways with a coating of ice the Packard sedan of Louis Dries, of Bristol, was damaged when it collided with another machine near Penn Valley.

The Dries car was operated by Samuel Dries, son of the Bristol furniture dealer. The rear of the machine skidded and slid into a car driven by a Holmesburg man. Neither of the drivers were hurt.

The Dries car was damaged to the extent of about $100 and the other machine will cost nearly $500 for repairs.

DELAYED DEBUNKING

There ought to be a statute of limitations limiting the time in which iconoclastic historians and smart-aleck commentators may enforce their special statute of limitation against popular beliefs, myths, superstitions, legends and long accepted "truths." It is suggested that after withstanding the ravages of time and intelligent scrutiny for a century they should be thereafter forever inviolate and sacred.

Why should the public suffer such disillusionment as it experienced when a British author "proved" that Shylock was not a Jew but an Englishman who lived before the first Jewish invasion of the British Isles?

It would have been less hard on sentimental mankind had the iconoclasts not waited so long to prove that all legends are as false as Bruce's spider, King Alfred's cakes and George Washington's little hatchet. Faith isn't so hard to blast and less havoc is wrought in the blasting if the faith is not of too long standing.

Why did they wait until now to destroy our trust in the legends about horsehair snakes, toads imprisoned for decades without apparent suffering, about the cherry tree, the infallibility of the Revolutionary fathers and of "our" cause, in hexerei, in the weather instincts of the groundhog and the uses of the signs of the zodiac in backyard gardening.

LONELIEST

Tristan de Cunha has long been considered the loneliest habitation of man. It is an island in the South Atlantic, midway between South America and Africa.

On this island there is no written law; no courts, no politicians, no postoffice to get the gossip in; no clubs, no money to earn or spend, no taxes to pay, no rent, no insurance, no radios, no autos, no air planes, no railroad, no sewers, no paved roads; no white way but the stars above; no doctor, no dentist, no health board, no chlorinated water, for nature has put a reservoir 8,000 above the settlement of 150 persons.

Tristan de Cunha is no doubt lonely. A citizen of the smallest and most isolated community in the United States would be most unhappy were he set down upon its shores. And he would make the contented natives of the island a miserable as himself, for he would create a longing for the things he do not possess, but which they do not miss, never having known them.

Fanciful and forbidding as this dot on the world map appears from descriptions of it, it has its attraction for a certain type of mind. Civilized man finds it desirable a times to revert to the uncivilized, at least in his imagination.

Blessed are the poor. They get up early enough to enjoy these beautiful mornings.

A friend is one who can forgive you for everything except climbing above his level.

About the only people who suffer in silence are those who suffer who required to remain silent.

Labor-saving devices for the home have multiplied, but a woman will tell the world she is busy she doesn't know what to do.

SYNOPSIS
Joe Lane, ex-pugilist, song plugger, and hit of QRS Radio Station, and his wife, Katherine, have one child, Little Pal, whom they both adore. Joe, believing Arthur Phillips, manager of the station, to be his best friend, accepts a big contract from him, not knowing that Phillips is in love with Katherine. But Katherine, becoming angry because of Joe's careless and irresponsible habits, quarrels with him, and during the reconciliation admits to Joe that Phillips wants her to be "nice to him." The song plugger is furious, but promises Katherine he will not fight. He breaks his promise, however, knocking Phillips out. Meanwhile, at home...

Those doubts, like great, black crows, kept flocking into the cozy room. Questions to which there were no answers. Katherine tried to forget them. And, as much to divert her own thoughts as to keep the boy from asking unanswerable questions, she began a little game the two often played.

"Who's got your nose?" she asked quickly, reaching out her hand and pretending to snatch away the rosy little button on the baby's face. She held her thumb between her first and second finger.

"Oh-h-h-h! My little nose is gone away," cried the child, trying hard to pretend consternation and holding his hands over his face "You give it right back to me, Muvver!" he gurgled in high spirits, stretching forth a chubby fist.

A buzzing sound in the next room called Katherine to sudden attention.

"Be a good boy, now, while mother answers the 'phone," Katherine admonished, giving the child a quick pat and hurrying from the room.

But just across the threshold she stopped. Again those forebodings returned. Had anything happened? Had Joe been hurt? Had he fought with Phillips? But how silly, she reprimanded herself sharply. Nothing had happened. It was probably Joe, just calling her to be certain she and Little Pal were listening to before he began his hour on the air.

And, to some extent, Katherine was right. For Joe was in a telephone booth at QRS, putting through a call for his wife. His mind seemed suddenly to have cleared. He could think rationally, now. A little while before, he couldn't. Everything that had happened was in rather a vague haze. He remembered striking Phillips, and the man had gone down. Then there was nothing very clear to him until he had somehow seen the lights of the radio station looming before him. They were queerly bright—that was all that had seemed to impress him.

Punny that wretch hadn't broken his shoulder. Joe moved his arm a bit and decided that the bruise must be rather bad. But his knuckles—they did hurt. They were all bandaged, now. Oh, yes, he had come in and had been surprised to see them scuffed and bleeding. What a waller that had been! He grinned again. He had been trying to get the bandage—his own handkerchief—about the hand and had called to the electrician to help him.

The second buzz of the telephone ringing sounded loud. Why was it taking Kitty so long to answer the 'phone. But it wasn't long, really. He reminded himself. He had so much on his mind—so many things to think about, that was all.

"Hello!" Kitty's voice was there. "Hello, darling," came the answer, and the girl's heart leapt. It was Joe, and he was all right. She had been foolish about not wanting to answer. "Just want to tell you not to worry any more."

"Oh, Joe, I have been worried. Did anything happen?"
"Nothing serious. But that party won't bother you any more. And after tonight I'm taking a new job." The song plugger's voice was confident and reassuring. "Everything's gonna be just swell after this. I just sneaked away for a minute to tell you how much I love you, baby. An' is my Little Pal gonna listen in? Oke! There's the announcer givin' me the touch off right now. I can see him 'r'm the booth, here. My first song's gonna tell you just how I feel about you. There..." A snacking noise was transmitted over the wire. "There's a kiss for you an' one for Little Pal. D'ja hear 'em, sweets? Oke! Bye-Bye!"

Katherine turned away from the 'phone, almost assured that everything was indeed all right. Back in the baby's room there was Little Pal himself, twisting the knobs of the receiving set. His tiny hands knew exactly where to turn. The voice of the announcer broke into the stillness.

"... Joe Lane, singing an original song he wrote especially for all you folks out there tonight. You all like Joe, and you're going to like this song, 'Ke-razy For You.' In fact, I think it's going to be one of the biggest hits of the year."

"Didn't you mean Century," came Joe's voice banteringly. And then, like a whisper: "Are you listening, Kitty, darling? Here it is! All right, boys, let's go. Make it hot! Pass the mustard!"

The unseen orchestra pattered a few bars softly, like thin fingers of summer rain at the window pane. Then Joe's voice, that voice with the crooning lilt that so many thousands loved.

"Bye-Bye Baby, here comes your train..."

Kiss and cuddle me tight... Oh-oh! Say you love me and then... say you love me again..."

Little Pal beamed up at his mother, his violet eyes round and bright, like the button-eyes in a teddy-bear's head. "There is my Daddy, Muvver!" he announced proudly.

Like the baby, Katherine leaned toward the loud speaker as if to catch a glimpse of the singer in it. All the troubles of the day seemed so foolish, now. Joe would always be there when she called. He was crazy about her, just as he was singing the song to her. And she wouldn't worry any more.

Little Pal was clapping his hands beating time to the jagged, jazz rhythm. He tried to follow the words to repeat them.

"Muvver, dear, wasn't that swell?" he gurgled as the chorus ended. "Don't you just love Daddy so?"

"Yes, sweetest, it was swell." Katherine leaned over and gave the child a hug. "Daddy is a wonderful man and we're lucky to have such a Daddy, aren't we?"

And as she spoke, she realized that she meant what she said with all her heart. What would anything be without Joe? His personality colored everything around him. And if she did expect too much of him, it was, perhaps, because she loved him so much. It was incredible that she should have thought just this evening of separating from him. With all his faults he was the only man she had ever loved. Careless and flippant, yes, but true blue despite that. Why, his voice—the way he sang—showed that. But there it was again. This time, tender with a catch and a little sob in it.

"Now that I'm used to you... I'd be so blue if we should ever part. I've grown so used to you... the things you do."

Are part of me, sweetheart... The crooning, sweetness trailed off into thin air. Katherine sat up with a jerk as the announcer's voice broke into her reverie.

You have just heard Joe Lane singing his latest number. "Used to You" the man was saying. "You will now hear Martin's Kentuckyans in a red hot piece you all know. After this number Joe is going to sing for us again. So don't go 'way, folks, don't go 'way."

As the jazz players began to beat out a crisp dance tune Katherine reached toward the receiving set. "Let's turn it off, Junior," she said. "It sounds so funny after Daddy's wonderful singing."

"But Muvver!" Little Pal objected, frowning anxiously, "we might miss Daddy if you do that. Let's just make believe we don't hear that old band."

Smiling, Katherine agreed and leaned over to kiss the baby. He snatched at her face and then held up his pink fist exultingly.

"Now I got Muvver's nose," he chortled.

Before she could recover that important member of her face the doorbell rang. Instantly all her fears came rushing back to her. Who could it be? It couldn't be Joe, for she had just heard the announcer say he was to sing again in a few minutes.

THE UNSEEN HAND That Cranks Your Car

DEEP in your car lies the battery. It's a silent, efficient machine that performs its tasks with little attention or thought on your part. But beware the dangers of neglecting your battery entirely—cranking is no fun. Drive in regularly and have your battery checked—it's a money-saving habit.

America for the world. A land and a future worthy of a new Walt Whitman to sing about.

And it is moving forward. It is all part of a superb will—an energy—a determination that is gaining life and vitality and strength from the mass power of a hundred and fifty million struggling, dreaming, discontented people.

It is the only necessary truth to know about Red Russia—the little facts about the cruelty and the hard life and the dissatisfaction are unimportant.

The cities with their great five year plan of industrial efficiency are at last attempting along practical lines to let it tune with the Russian land—to modernize and industrialize it along with themselves. At last they are carrying the real revolution to the Russian masses. And the peasant masses are meeting them more than half way.

Here on the broad backs of these strong country folks the great social and economic upheaval must finally base itself. And once this broad foundation, this eighty percent, is educated, mechanized, modernized, it will come into its own. Eventually this fourth must rule; its voice must be the master voice of all Russia.

In the meantime it turns Red in one great, overwhelming mass movement. It consciously knows that to get its tractors, its machines, its schools, new homes, its electric light, shoes, dresses, its silk stockings, it must become part of the great Russian machine.

Almost eleven years ago, alone in Russia, with the world plotting and prophesying ruin and destruction of the Soviet power and idea, I wrote that this new thing in the world would live and that some day the peasant would control it.

I repeat that now. But he will be a new peasant, of new stature. He will no longer be the ignorant, illiterate, superstitious peasant of the dark villages. He will be a man of the new world of machinery.

When that time comes his country will be his, and he will drive his tractor into the seats of the mighty in the Kremlin in Moscow.

BASKETBALL FANS NOT DISAPPOINTED IN GAME

Tullytown Team Divided Into Two Squads When Other Five Doesn't Appear

CONTEST IS ENJOYED

TULLYTOWN, Jan. 22.—Morrisville A. C. failed to put in an appearance in their scheduled game with Tullytown A. A. in Mundi's Hall, last evening, so not to disappoint the large crowd that assembled, Coach Benny Prall divided his squad into two teams and let them battle it out.

Team A proved the better of the two and scored an easy 35-24 victory over Team B. Team B, with several old-timers in its line-up, put up an uphill battle, but weakened toward the closing minutes of the fray and enabled their younger opponents to roll in a large number of points.

Radice and Nickerson stood in the spotlight for the winners, while the losers' best was Burton, who rang the cords for seven field goals.

Tullytown Juniors put one over on the Penns Manor five, defeating them 26-17. This was the preliminary fray of the evening.

The Penns Manor team displayed better teamwork than the home towners, but lacked the proper spirit and gameness. In the closing quarter this quintet came through with a few twin-pointers which threw a scare into the Tullytown rosters.

Moon and P. Greenlee were the stars of the game. Moon accounted for ten of Tullytown's points while P. Greenlee scored seven for the losing five.

Stomach Ailments and Nervousness No Problem for New and Different Medicine

MRS. CLAIRE BUDD

"No words of mine can express my gratitude for this great medicine, Konjola," said Mrs. Claire Budd, 2428 Percy street, Philadelphia, Pa. "I was the victim of stomach trouble for more than a year. The simplest of foods caused gas formations, bloating and intense pain. Constipation added to my distress. My nerves were in a dreadful state and sleep was frequently out of the question. My mother had been taking Konjola with marvelous results and told me of it."

"I knew at once that I had found the right medicine. My nerves responded almost immediately and in a short time were strong again. My stomach ailment soon cleared up and I found that I could eat anything I wished without the least discomfort. I never felt the need of cathartics for constipation had gone the way of my other ailments. I am stronger and healthier than I have been in years. Mother and I will both be forever grateful to Konjola."

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

Bringing Electricity to Holy Land

WHILE JORDAN RIVER rolls on, it will be bringing power, light and prosperity to the people of Palestine. After many years of planning, the ambitious project of the Russian engineer, Rutenberg is at last to become reality, and the Holy Land will be the scene of one of the largest electrical enterprises in Europe.

Since the Palestine mandate became effective the Holy Land has seen steady influx of population. And modern methods in working and living are fast superseding primitive conditions in even the smallest settlement. And so the hum of the dynamo is to sound its note of progress, and Jerusalem is to bask in the glow of the arc lamp.

The turbulent waters of the Jordan, which at some points falls 100 feet, are to be utilized, and in addition to the harnessing of this power, 25 foot dams are to be erected in this river and the Jarmuk River just above the confluence of the two streams. A lake 750 feet wide and 6 miles long is to be built in order to hold the water necessary to generate the power. After three giant turbines have done their work, the water will be turned back to the rivers. It is estimated that there will be an excess current of 6,300 volts, and this power will be transformed to high tension and be then conveyed to the principal transformer station. From this point, the power will be conveyed to Haifa and the settlement of Tel-Aviv, the all-Jewish city.

It is expected that the Rutenberg project will bring much prosperity to Jerusalem and plans are being made for factories and plants on an ambitious scale all calculated to bring the Holy Land in line with progress and modern achievement. Work is being rushed and it is hoped to complete the various units by the Spring.
